A CUTE ONE.

A New Wrinkle That Lies Over Previous Dead-Beats Stories.

Cleaved Head.

"Talk about your hotel beats," said a clerk in one of the hotels of the city the other evening. "I heard of one of the toughest cases which happened a short time ago. I got the final part of the story from the proprietor of a prominent restaurant, to whom the fellow told a history of the affair before he skipped out of town. He said that one evening this fellow came in and sat down to a table, giving his orders with the air of a millionaire. He was nicely dressed, and wore a long, handsome cigar. After he had finished his supper he started out, seeming to forget that he hadn't paid. The proprietor stopped him with a reminder of the fact, when it was found that the fellow was a beat, and hadn't a cent of money. The restaurateur was angry, and was about to administer a dose of leather beneath the tail of that elegant visitor, when the fellow begged off, and said he would leave his pantaloons with the proprietor securely till morning. The gentleman, in order to test him, concealed, and divested himself of the attire mentioned garment, leaving only the light covering of his underclothing. With his other buttoned close around him, he still had the appearance of a finely dressed gentleman with his pantaloons crimped in his boot tops. He left the "breeches and went out. Bearing a certain prominent mark, he walked to the register, entered his name, demanded to be shown to his room, and instructed the clerk to have him called at 8 o'clock in the morning, all of which was complied with; but when the boy called him at 8 o'clock the air about that room was blue with profanity, and the fellow ordered the boy to send up the landlord immediately. The landlord, thinking something terrible had happened, immediately repaired to the room and found his guest apparently in a terrible rage. He wanted to know what kind of a d—d house they kept there, full of potty sneak thieves. 'Just look here,' said he, 'my pantaloons containing my pocket book and watch are gone, and some one connected with this house took them, for they must have crawled in over the transom. I tell you by—', I'll give this place away to every man on the road.' The landlord was considerably chagrined about the matter, and went out for a pair of pantaloons, and as the rest of the clothes were very elegant, an elegant pair was purchased. The fellow was then taken to breakfast and shown the best attention the house could afford. After breakfast the landlord gave him $20, as he had to leave immediately, and promised to leave no stone unturned until the thief was discovered. The cute young gentleman went to the restaurant and redeemed his pants, told the story, and skipped the town about $19 ahead."

Outdone by a Boy

A lad in Boston, rather small for his years, worked as an errand boy for four gentlemen who do business there. One day the gentlemen were chafing him little about being a small, and said to him:

"You will never amount to much; you never can do much business; you are too small."

The little fellow looked at them.

"Well," said he, "as small as I am, I can do something which none of you can do."

"Ah, what is that?" said they.

"I don't know as I ought to tell you," he replied.

But they were anxious to know, and urged him to tell what he could do that none of them were able to do.

"I can keep from swearing!" said the little fellow.

There were some blisters on four mainly ideas, and there seemed to be very little anxiety for further information on the point.

JAMES C. LARK, Chairman.

CHALMERS, the Mississippi rebel Brigadier in congress, reports that Yazoo is "solid for Hancock."

A CORRESPONDENT of the Chicago Times, writing from Indianapolis, last Saturday, uses the following language: "The one thing certain about the campaign is that nobody wants English. The next indubitable fact is that they don't want Lauder."

This report returns from Kentucky and North Carolina show a startling increase of population. Kentucky claims an increase of 413,321 since 1870, and in North Carolina the census shows an increase of 60 per cent. Can this be an honest count, in either case?

SOLON CHASE, of Maine, is an out-and-out fanatic, and won't have even a suspicion of hard-money clinging about him. Recently he was placed on the Maine-Fusion electoral ticket, by a bargain made by the greenback and democratic central committee of that state, but, as it now appears, without his consent, for he is out in a card denouncing the attempted fusion of the two parties. Mr. Chase says:

A Fusion Electoral ticket with either of the old parties is an abandonment of the great national principles that gave the greenback party existence. It is not thought of in any state except Maine, and would not be here if the democratic party could stand alone. If the greenback party's election ticket is to forfeit all claims for any regard to principle, and to lose the respect of honest, candid men of all parties, Hancock and English—what a ticket for a greenbacker! If we don't make a fusion electoral ticket, it is said, the democrats will run straight tickets. Why shouldn't they? If they believe the hard-money doctrine in their platform why don't they seek to make converts by advancing the principle? If they have any distinctive principles they are certainly antagonistic to the principles of the greenback party.

The hard-money Democrats of this congressional district have nominated for congress James H. Scott, of Champaign, the Greenback nominee. Of course they could have no hope of electing anybody in this district, and as a consequence it is a matter of indifference to the Democracy whether their candidate endures two distinctive platforms.

Mr. WILLIAM H. ENGLISH says, through the associated press, in a few "brief remarks" that he will prosecute for libel all who falsely assail his personal character. This is right. In substance Mr. English there is quite enough to be said that is true, and there is neither necessity nor justification for railing in falsehood.—Cato Deo.

THE decrease in the national debt during the month of July just passed was $6,576,063. The total debt, less cash in the treasury, now is $1,936,596,241.

THE decrease in the national debt during the month of July just passed was $6,576,063. The total debt, less cash in the treasury, now is $1,936,596,241.

In 1871, six years after the close of the war, Lyman Trumbull said in a speech delivered at Springfield, before a State Convention:

The war is over. The contest is done. Now what political organization will be safest for the American people? Hereafter to whom shall we look? Shall we look to the party which brought upon this government the civil war? To that party which inaugurated the doctrine that to the victors belong the spoils? To that party which now desires to depreciate the currency of the country by issuing millions and millions more of it?"

The Ship of State, ten years ago, was crippled. It has been run upon the quicksands and rocks, and was falling to pieces. The Republican party took possession of her. They have been sailing her for the last ten years, not only over the boisterous waves of political commotion, but through the terrific tornadoes of civil war, and they have brought the noble old ship upon a peaceful ocean, strengthened in all her proportions, and there she now lies in peace and prosperity.

A year later, in a letter written previous to the Liberal Republican convention in Cincinnati, Mr. Trumbull said:

The Democrats must be absolutely excluded; their suggestions must not be heeded; their wishes must not be considered. They are a body of men mostly traitors, who cannot be made useful for any purpose. The Cincinnati meeting must be distinctively a conference of Republicans—one who has been prominently identified with Republican policies and measures.

Democrats must be told to stand aloof; they must be ignored and spurned.

Still later Mr. Trumbull said:

The Democratic party has never yet done an act that would command it to the favorable consideration of the people of the United States, but on the contrary, its traditions and its acts are now, and ever have been, a standing menace to the progress and civilization of the nineteenth century:

The editor of the Review seems to be worried about reference being made to that class of people who were called copperheads during the war. Now, would it not be in order for the Review to give some attention to Lyman Trumbull, the democratic nominee for Governor. In 1872, in a letter written previous to the Cincinnati Convention, Trumbull styled the Democratic party as "a body of men mostly traitors, who can not be made useful for any purpose."

How does the editor of the Review enjoy this opinion of the Democratic party, and if Judge Thornton were reading this extract to a Decatur audience, he would emphasize it by saying: "And mark you, it is the language of Judge Trumbull, the Democratic nominee for Governor of Illinois." Furthermore in the letter Trumbull says:

"Democrats must be told to stand aloof; they must be ignored and spurned."

THAT independent paper, the New York Evening Post, which is nothing if not fair, thus concludes its comments upon Hancock's and English's letters:

All of the letters of acceptance have now been published, and they leave the political situation substantially where they found it. What the Democratic candidates have said will not shake the determination of those voters who believe that Gen. [Garfield]—a student of civil affairs and an actor in them, one who has strong convictions as to economic and legislative subjects which he has expressed with clearness and vigor during a long period of eminent service in Congress, backed by a party whose course in respect to many of those subjects in the right direction—is to be preferred for President to Gen. Hancock, a brave and honest soldier, whose views of civil affairs are unknown, backed by a party which still seems to be searching for principles.

MR. MORRILL is quoted as saying admiringly of Senator Hamlin: "He has never known sickness, and has been the most careful and attentive to his public duties, of whatever character, of any man in the country. He never wears a piece of dress or undressing of any description, a pair of gloves or an overcoat. Even in our coldest weather Mr. Hamlin, at his advanced age, plods along, dressed in the coldest of costumes—the old-fashioned swallow-tailed coat—without wraps of any kind, while his fellows are almost frozen to death beneath heavy overcoats and the heaviest of underclothing. His power of endurance is wonderful, and his capacity for work great."

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 3.—The municipal election in this city to-day resulted in a republican victory, Mayor W. W. Liss being elected for the third term by 97 majority and a plurality of 102. The board of aldermen and the common council is unchanged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A Lima correspondent says that there is an ugly rumor going about that some men entered Moqueca, where the Chilians left their sick in the care of natives, and murdered every Chilian they could find. It is also rumored the Chilians have sent a force to wreak a terrible revenge.

SANTA FE, Aug. 3.—Victoria and her murderous band of Apaches have been brought to bay at last, and there is a prospect of their speedy capture. They are harassed within Mexico and the United States troops, and Col. Grierson, in command of the latter, is confident the redskins cannot make their escape.
